DEAR FRIENDS,

Considering the life passion of our founder, Ralph C. Wilson, Jr., it is difficult to avoid the occasional use of a football metaphor when describing the work of the Foundation that carries his name. A good example is thinking about our twenty-year life span as the equivalent of a game clock, and as we closed out 2019, the whistle sounded marking the end of our first quarter.

To carry out his legacy, Ralph Wilson left behind a very large bequest to the Foundation. But beyond appointing his four Life Trustees and mandating the spend-down model, he intentionally empowered those Trustees to decide just how his gift was to be distributed. He wisely expressed to them that what we know today will not necessarily inform the Foundation in the changing circumstances and conditions of tomorrow. And those conditions could not be changing more rapidly as we pen this letter amidst both a global pandemic and the long-overdue push for racial equity and justice in our country that has affected and will continue to affect our communities in ways we are just beginning to process and understand.

Looking back, during our first five years, we were deeply engaged in how the Foundation’s efforts blend with those of our teammates and partners within the communities we serve. The original game plan established by our Trustees has given us a great start. This first quarter of the Foundation’s existence required a measured effort to understand the nuances of the field of play, as we concentrated on the landscape of needs and opportunities within each of our mission focus areas, all the while making grants and testing ideas. Throughout 2019, our team began to narrow and refine our grantmaking strategies in ways that we believe will provide the greatest opportunity to work collaboratively within our two regions to make a lasting and positive impact.

The urgency our team has felt from the very beginning of our work has only been amplified by the magnitude of the challenges we’re likely to face during the second quarter of our spend-down timeline. Undoubtedly, we will need to make more adjustments, confirming Ralph Wilson’s wisdom in expecting his appointed Trustees to continually read the field and adapt our work accordingly. Our small, but committed team is up for the challenge and humbled by the opportunity to play a role in advancing the quality of life of these two regions beloved by Mr. Wilson.

In partnership,

EUGENE DRIKER
Chairman & Life Trustee

DAVID O. EGNER
President & CEO
RALPH C. WILSON, JR. BELIEVED TO MAKE EFFECTIVE CHANGE, EFFORTS SHOULD MAKE AN IMPACT FROM THE START, YET CARRY LONG INTO THE FUTURE. TO DO BOTH, HE EARMARKED A PORTION OF HIS ESTATE AND THE EVENTUAL SALE OF HIS BELOVED BUFFALO BILLS TO FUND HIS NAMESAKE FOUNDATION.

The Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. Foundation began operations in 2015 to continue his legacy — one of generosity and innovation, healthy risk-taking and collaboration, and an unshakable community focus. Today, his hand-picked Life Trustees have determined to focus the efforts of the foundation on Mr. Wilson’s home and adopted home regions of Southeast Michigan and Western New York. With a structure that dictates spend-down of our funds by 2035, we strive to match the urgency that people in need feel every day with community investments that consider both immediate and long-term benefit.

OUR MISSION

OUR TIME IS SHORT. BUT WE HAVE A STEADFAST COMMITMENT TO WORKING WITH COMMUNITY CHANGE-MAKERS TO MAKE A LONG-TERM IMPACT.

On May 5, 2019, Project Play WNY hosted its first “Free Play Challenge Event” at the ADPRO Sports Training Center and welcomed more than 500 children and families to sample over 12 sports throughout the day.
If 62% of kids have given up on sports, what are we doing wrong? That is a question, among many others, that the Foundation and our partners at the Aspen Institute and ESPN asked during the “Don’t Retire, Kid” campaign that launched in the summer of 2019.

This national public awareness campaign drew attention to the fact that too many children are “retiring” from sports prematurely, due in part to pressure from adults and from pressure on families to cover the escalating costs of participating. According to studies commissioned by the Aspen Institute, most kids drop out of sports at age 11 and most often because they weren’t having fun anymore.

Locally, the Foundation expanded on the television PSA campaign by adding print, radio, outdoor and digital advertisements with a goal of getting the attention of parents, coaches and youth sport providers to self-reflect on how we can change the current youth sports culture and system which has become too focused on making money, grooming the next super star athlete or winning championships. Basically, picking winners and losers before kids have even grown into their interests or bodies.

The campaign also helped to point parents, coaches and other stakeholders in our two regions to a host of resources that have been developed through the national Project Play initiative – and locally through our Project Play: Southeast Michigan and Project Play: Western New York partners to help get and keep kids active in the game. These included free online coaches training programs, a healthy sport index, equipment sharing programs, “Free Play” activity opportunities and more.

To learn more about our Project Play initiatives, visit: ProjectPlaySEMI.org or ProjectPlayWNY.org.
Campaign kicked-off in August 2019 with PSA and tweet from Kobe Bryant and an interview on SportsCenter about the campaign and Project Play initiative.

Regional campaign generated more than 45 million impressions in SEMI and WNY.

The regional Project Play websites received more than 30,000 visitors each month on average.

Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. Foundation awarded ESPN 2020 Humanitarian Award as Philanthropist of the Year.
Hearts & Hands (WNY)
THERE ARE MORE THAN 41.8 MILLION FAMILY MEMBERS—spouses, daughters, sons, grandchildren—and friends in the United States caring for older adults, a number that will grow dramatically in the coming years. And while many don’t call themselves “caregivers,” they often share that providing care for a loved one is a rewarding, yet challenging journey—one they wouldn’t change, but one that requires broad communities of support to succeed.

The Foundation is investing in supporting a caregiver’s journey by elevating the importance of their efforts, strengthening those communities and networks, and by supporting providers whose resources and expertise can make the challenging journey more rewarding and easier to navigate.

Similarly, paid caregivers are in more demand than ever as the “Boomer” generation ages. Family and friends rely on direct care workers to complement their support, provide opportunities for respite and bring expertise to the journey. We aim to elevate their critical roles by highlighting the often-hidden value and contributions they make to families and communities every day. We’ll do this by investing in efforts to make these jobs more desirable and rewarding with career paths designed to support their success and fill the growing demand.

PHI  $50,000

To support PHI’s research to improve the quality of jobs for direct care workers.
Healthcare is projected to be the largest employment sector in the U.S. by 2026. And within healthcare, the fastest growing occupations are “direct care” or “front line” caregivers. Those caregivers are arguably the most essential people in our healthcare system, as demonstrated most recently throughout the COVID-19 pandemic. Yet many caregivers lack the support necessary to be successful in their field and their value often goes unnoticed.

Despite the number of job openings, recruitment and retention of caregivers remain a pervasive challenge. The retention rates for caregivers hovers at just 50% due to a set of complex barriers to success. Many direct care workers face significant obstacles, including a need for more robust job training, access to reliable transportation or child care, the inadequate appreciation of their importance and much more.

This problem isn’t just isolated to our two regions, but across the country. So, when the Foundation began to explore new ways to find lasting, sustainable solutions to address those challenges, our conversations led us to the Cleveland Clinic where we were introduced to the developing THRIVE model. THRIVE – or the Transformational Healthcare Readiness and Innovative Vocational Education model - is designed to increase retention rates by innovatively addressing obstacles that caregivers face, including new screening tools, 1:1 coaching and enhanced caregiver training.

Recognizing that THRIVE could also be expanded and applied to different health systems to make a meaningful difference in the lives of caregivers and their patients, the Foundation reached out to Catholic Health in Western New York and Ascension Michigan in Southeast Michigan. Both already had a shared priority of improving retention rates and a collaborative spirit to work cross-regionally on this program. With a cumulative investment of over $20 million, which included more than $15 million in grants from the Foundation to the health systems and an independent evaluation by the Rand Corporation, the THRIVE pilot officially launched in June 2019.

While still very early in its implementation, the THRIVE program is a promising and exciting step forward to increase the retention rate of caregivers through a self-sustaining financial model. If proven successful, it has the possibility of being replicated and implemented throughout other healthcare systems across the country helping to build capacity and increase support for caregivers – and ultimately providing an opportunity to value these essential workers even more.
Entrepreneurship & Economic Development
SEVERAL YEARS INTO RECOVERY AFTER A DECADES-LONG ECONOMIC SLIDE IN BOTH SOUTHEAST MICHIGAN AND WESTERN NEW YORK, the Foundation’s investments in Entrepreneurship & Economic Development look to leverage this momentum by spurring small business growth, place-based community and economic development, and talent attraction and retention.

In each region, the Foundation seeks to strengthen the entrepreneurial support system from grassroots to high growth by helping entrepreneurs access critical resources and technical assistance, so they can get what they need to start or grow their business. Such support can mean better access to capital and business planning resources, as well as capacity-building support and more. Lack of access to these resources is particularly acute with women and minority entrepreneurs, and the Foundation supports efforts to attain and sustain economic growth that is inclusive and equitable.

In addition, the Foundation focuses on place-based investments in key commercial corridors located in underinvested areas, and selectively supports capital projects for regional cultural institutions – all to help support neighborhood job growth, build community wealth and generate regional economic development in our communities.

STRENGTHENING COMMERCIAL CORRIDORS IN TWO CITIES

In our two regions’ largest cities, multi-stakeholder collaboratives are helping to drive inclusive economic growth within neighborhoods and in key commercial corridors.

In 2019, the Foundation made multi-million dollar investments in the Strategic Neighborhood Fund in Detroit and the East Side Corridor Fund in Buffalo – two large scale public-private initiatives that will help to frame and guide the Foundation’s neighborhood investment work in these two cities for several years to come.

STRATEGIC NEIGHBORHOOD FUND

WHO: The Strategic Neighborhood Fund (SNF) is a partnership between the City of Detroit, Invest Detroit, neighborhood residents and corporate/philanthropic donors. SNF is administered by Invest Detroit, a 501(c)3 organization and community development financial institution (CDFI).

WHAT: Launched in 2016, the SNF focused on three Detroit neighborhoods with the goal of improving streetscapes and walkability, kickstarting local business and adding or preserving affordable housing. Since that time, the Fund has expanded from three neighborhoods to ten and with funds available for neighborhood investment growing from $42 million to more than $170 million.

The 10 neighborhoods are spread out across every council district: Jefferson Chalmers, Warrendale/Cody-Rouge, Campau/Davison/Banglatown, East Warren/Cadieux, Grand River Northwest, Gratiot/7 Mile and Russell Woods/Nardin Park, Islandview/Greater Villages, Southwest/Vernor and Livernois-McNichols.

GRANT: In December 2019, the Foundation announced a five-year, $10 million grant to support commercial corridor development and innovative park developments in the ten SNF neighborhoods. The grant follows a $2 million investment the Foundation provided in 2017 to support development in the first three neighborhoods.
Detroit’s historic Avenue of Fashion is open for business. The completed Livernois streetscape project includes new bike lanes, landscaping, lighting and wider sidewalks for businesses and their customers.
RECENT HIGHLIGHTS

COLLABORATION
Twelve Invest Detroit and City of Detroit departments and agencies worked together to manage more than 30 SNF projects in 2019.

MASTER PLAN DEVELOPMENT
SNF facilitated 38 activities since January 2019 to engage residents in creating a vision and development framework for their neighborhoods, complemented by 68 engagement activities focused on parks and streetscape work, as well as commercial corridor developments.

COMMERCIAL CORRIDOR IMPROVEMENTS
Six of 10 SNF neighborhoods have commercial investment activity taking place with half of the projects being led by local Detroit developers of color and another third led by four different community development organizations (CDOs).

STREETSCAPES CONSTRUCTION
Improvements are complete along Livernois and Bagley, with project construction progressing along Grand River, McNichols, Kercheval and Conant.

PARKS CONSTRUCTION
Jayne Field Park construction is complete with continued progress happening at Clark Park, Butzel Playfield and Zussman Park.
WHO: East Side Avenues is a unique public/private partnership that provides capital and organizational support to transformational projects in targeted areas along four East Side commercial corridors. East Side Avenues is part of Governor Cuomo’s Buffalo Billion investment plan, which is providing $65 million in state funding to the revitalization of Buffalo’s East Side.

East Side Avenues is centered in community priorities. Prior to finalizing the investment strategy for the initiative, Empire State Development (ESD) and the City of Buffalo partnered with the University at Buffalo Regional Institute (UBRI) to reach out to community members, to listen, analyze past investments and create a comprehensive plan focused on what key stakeholders said they’d like to see happen and what projects community members believe are important for promoting economic activity.

WHAT: Understanding the tremendous opportunity to leverage New York State’s $65 million East Side Corridor Economic Development Fund, private and philanthropic organizations created an additional pooled $8 million East Side Collaborative Fund to support operations, programs, capacity building and community infrastructure associated with implementing five economic development programs along four major East Side Avenues (Michigan, Jefferson, Fillmore and Bailey). The philanthropic commitments include direct support for East Side nonprofit partners to help them build their effectiveness in delivering services, thereby strengthening the overall East Side Avenues initiative.

GRANT: In 2019, the Foundation made a three-year, $4 million commitment to support the East Side Corridor Economic Development Fund at the Community Foundation for Greater Buffalo.

During non-school time, there is a tremendous opportunity to expose kids and teens to activities that not only complement what’s learned in school, but also prepare them for meaningful work in the future and spark a journey towards becoming curious, fulfilled and well-rounded adults.

In order to grow these critical learning experiences for children, the Foundation invests in building the capacity and sustainability of afterschool programs across a wide variety of interest areas – from STEM to food entrepreneurship, music to mentorship and more. The literary arts, which includes storytelling, poetry, songwriting, spoken word, is another area where youth have the opportunity to develop and hone these versatile and communications skills that will set them up for success in adulthood.

In 2019, the Foundation invested in a collaborative capacity building project, Writing Across the Rustbelt, which provided a three-year grant of $450,000 to support InsideOut Literary Arts and Just Buffalo Literary Center. These two literary art organizations provide youth programming in Greater Detroit and Buffalo, respectively, and had developed an informal relationship in the prior years, sharing best practices and connecting staff across the two regions.

Through this new formal engagement, the organizations hired a shared consultant to help pinpoint specific strengths and challenges and to identify pathways for growth and sustainability. Within the first year of engagement, the project has demonstrated that together, the two organizations are unlocking a unique way to pool resources, perspective, expertise and talent that will benefit each organization over the long term. And as each organization navigates through the COVID-19 crisis, both are confident that this partnership will support them in ways that could not have been anticipated when the project began.
Laurie Dean Torrell (Just Buffalo Executive Director), Eve Berry (Eve Berry & Partners LLC consultant), and Suma Karaman Rosen (InsideOut Literary Arts) share results of combined capacity and needs assessment in September 2019.

“The partnership which has been forged through this project — between our two organizations in these two rust-belt cities — is magnifying, compounding and extending both organizations’ transformative work for even greater impact, through a time surely to be among the most challenging in any of our lifetimes,” said Laurie Dean Torrell, Just Buffalo Literary Center Executive Director.

“Just Buffalo Literary Center and InsideOut Literary Arts have been serving young people in the Buffalo and Detroit communities for decades,” said Suma Karaman Rosen, InsideOut Literary Arts Executive Director. “One thing that has remained consistent across geography and across time is the power of youth voice. It is an honor and a joy to witness the sheer bravery of our young writers as they share their hopes, fears, opinions and dreams. I, for one, am continually in awe.”

A HOUSE NOT A HOME
By Zanaya Hussain, Just Buffalo Writing Center Fellow 2020

We search for homes in people.
Her kindness is the food on my plate.
His arms are the roof over my head.
How can I build a house from the ground up?
Her laugh is the welcome mat,
His eyes the porch light.
We answer, with your own two hands.
i am taking out the trash.
sky the opaque of a black grill cover stars behind my eyes sparkle-glass holes in the grill cover or holes in my lungs or the stars move and i watch
i a parasitic human.

Unexpected clear skies
    Beijing     NYC     Venice

i a parasitic human plastic bag of vegetable peelings in my hand i watch the stars behind my eyes and wonder if i am crazy.

Satellites visible between Vega     North Star     Orion

i wonder if i am crazy
watch satellites circle above me tiny glittering bugs among the stars i have never seen so clearly humans have tried so hard tried to colonize even this unreachable sky

i watch the earth shrug off its mantle of humanity and hope i will stay.

SPECIAL INITIATIVE: NONPROFIT SUPPORT & INNOVATION
WITHOUT STRONG, HEALTHY NONPROFITS THAT HAVE THE RESOURCES AND SUPPORT TO MEET THEIR MISSION, none of the work the Foundation invests in across its focus areas can happen.

While the Foundation works with individual grantees to help them build their own capacity through project-specific grants, it also is taking a sector view of nonprofit support as a special initiative of the Foundation in order to help strengthen communities. No one can do it alone.

For the Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. Foundation, this means strengthening and supporting intermediary organizations – nonprofits that support other nonprofits – and incentivizing them to begin or continue to work together as a network in service to their clients. It also means finding those moments where we can support a number of nonprofits working in collaboration to solve some of our most intractable issues. And, it means using what influence we have to understand and advocate for the issues we care about, all in partnership with the communities we serve.

Members of the WNY Nonprofit Support Group gathered at the Detroit Institute of Arts near the Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. Foundation’s headquarters in 2018. The new working group’s mission is to strengthen communities in Western New York and Monroe County by increasing the capacity of organizations that serve those areas. The group envisions a healthy nonprofit ecosystem in which organizations collaborate, learn and innovate together, ultimately becoming even more successful in delivering on their mission. In 2019, Katie Pieri was hired as the working group’s director to lead the design and oversight of the strategy for the group.

From long before we launched Co.act Detroit to this day, we’ve spent a great deal of time reflecting.

We sourced community input and recommendations from a diverse array of nonprofit organizations to inform every aspect of Co.act Detroit, from our two-day launch experience in June 2019 and our program and event categories to the physical dimensions and layout of our space.

We’ve viewed each program and event we’ve hosted and designed as an opportunity to hear the needs of our community, and to consider the type of organization we need to be to most effectively achieve our mission of accelerating collaborative impact in Southeast Michigan’s nonprofit community. And through our experiences — hosting approximately 5,200 people in the Co.act space for 42 programs and 61 events and meetings — we’ve collected an abundance of input and information to work with.

Our partnerships create real value for the nonprofit community, and teach us so much, too. Through our CoLab Connect program, we’ve partnered with seven organizations to provide services and technical assistance in our space since our launch, and combined, these partners have hosted over 50 coaching appointments with nonprofits in a range of expertise areas.

And, at the end of February, in close partnership with a strong group of nonprofit organizations, nonprofit support systems and academic institutions, we launched the Activate Fund, $1.5 million investment with initial funding by the Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. Foundation to connect nonprofit organizations serving Southeast Michigan with much needed financial and practical resources.

Now we find ourselves at an inflection point. Since our launch last year, we have served as a safe and neutral space for organizations to come together in an honest, intimate and collaborative fashion. But the launch of our Activate Fund opportunity coincided with the arrival to Southeast Michigan of the novel coronavirus, the disease it causes, COVID-19, and all the dynamic uncertainty it brings with it.

In this time, few things are certain. One certainty is the wisdom and necessity of social distancing to slow the spread of the disease, making necessary the postponement of our scheduled in-person programs and meetings for the coming months. But another certainty is that the nonprofit community will only continue to serve a critical role in maintaining the health of our communities and will serve that function for as long as it is possible and necessary to do so. These certainties have brought into sharp relief a question that we on the Co.act team often consider: As we respond to the current and emerging needs of the nonprofit community, how can we be more than just a space?
In uncertain times like these, I am encouraged by the spirit of inquiry and adaptation embodied by our team and our partners — virtues not so different, I think, from those which must have motivated Ralph C. Wilson, Jr. to empower the Trustees of the Wilson Foundation to decide, informed by the circumstances of the present day, exactly how his generous gifts would be distributed.

Everything about the present moment and the uncertainties it holds makes clear a core truth: the notion that we are separate is an illusion. That truth holds a promise of achieving so much more than we currently imagine and invites us to critically examine the barriers which have so far prevented us from seeing one another as collaborators, instead of as competitors.

So, as we work to adapt to changing circumstances and to find new ways to bring together Southeast Michigan's nonprofit ecosystem to learn from one another and share resources — through virtual programming, and through continued work on the Activate Fund award process — we also invite you to reflect on how unique this opportunity is. In that reflection, we encourage you to imagine the transformative impact we can achieve if we recognize the passions, resources and visions that connect us, and if we work with intention to strengthen those connections.

We're humbled by the vision of the things we can accomplish together in the time to come — through the Co.act Detroit space, and beyond it.
